Peer buddy: helping students reach their full poten-

Will Harris

"Peer Buddy is a program designed class for special needs students," said Anita Ray, special education teacher.

With over twenty-five students helping every semester, Peer Buddy has many programs throughout the year including transition school to work programs, physical therapy, a Valentine's dance that was on Feb. 10 and Special Olympics in various sports.

Special Olympics is a program that provides a year-round sports competition for people with special needs.

The next sport will be volleyball on March 4. "This experience is incredible in that you learn so much about yourself. It puts everything into perspective and makes you truly appreciative, but more than anything it provided me with some friendships," said Elizabeth Garrett, a Peer Buddy helper.

Robert Miller, a special education teacher, explained "This is an eye-opener. The students help the special needs students to fit in more successfully."

"We help them feel like normal people," said Vanessa Rodriguez, a Peer Buddy helper.

Peer Buddy helps CHS with programs such as recycling papers and supply ing the student body with snacks from the cart between classes, but most of all they help these students do their best.
